Mr. W. B. King, the big man of our police force, who is six feet six and one-half inches high, and weighs 250 pounds, was on the hollowest meeting held in the grove mile below town. Rev. Mr. Cowan asked everybody to get up and give a word of prayer. Mr. King, seemed to refuse. After several appeals Mr. Cowan walked around to Mr. King, and just as he was about to get up, he fell down off the bench, he discovered that Mr. King was standing flat-footed on the ground throughout his sermon, and smiling. We went back to his place at the altar.

We left the following from the Milledgeville Chronicle, of the 15th inst: An accomplished and pleasant gentleman passed on a visit on Wednesday last to the city of Anderson. He is a graduate of our college, with the highest honors in the class. He is now engaged in business in C. C., and doing a fine business there, with every prospect of success. The city of Anderson is proud to have such a son, and we would be glad to claim such citizens as Capt. C. S. Minor. He is making things hum with his disinterested and unselfish services. We hope he will sell goods for that price.

In the arrangement or location of electric lights and hydrants as been decided on to give every citizen his rights, and leave none to complain of taxation without participation in the health of the community. It is the best time to settle these matters. The question is not whether it pays the water works, but whether it is entitled to the benefits of these public works or not. We make these suggestions not as a matter of course, but merely as a suggestion. In the language of John W. Ashley let us have "equal rights to all and special privileges to none." It is a matter to be decided that citizen has a right to the benefits resulting from them.

It has often been asked how much water will the Stand Pipe contain. We have investigated, and find that it will contain 9,240,000 gallons. It is 1000 feet high, 100 feet in diameter at the base and 600 feet at the top. It contains 17,832,000 gallons. This structure was begun and completed within six weeks. In addition to the height it is 1000 feet in diameter at the base and 600 feet at the top. It contains 17,832,000 gallons. This structure was begun and completed within six weeks.
